

Biography:

Greg DeMarco, ExxonMobil Global Oil Spill Response Manager, Chair of API Oil Spill Preparedness and Response Subcommittee

Greg DeMarco currently serves as ExxonMobil's Global Oil Spill Response Manager. In that role, he coordinates the company's oil spill preparedness and response efforts, including ExxonMobil's oil spill response R&D program as well as external interfaces with Tier 3 response co-ops, trade associations, and government agencies. He currently chairs the Board of Directors for Clean Caribbean & Americas response co-op as well as the American Petroleum Institute's Oil Spill Preparedness and Response Subcommittee. He also sits on IPIECA's (International Petroleum Industry Environmental Conservation Association's) Oil Spill Working Group.

Greg has been with Exxon (now ExxonMobil) since 1997 where he has held a variety of operational and staff assignments in the Downstream and Safety, Health and Environment organizations.

Prior to joining Exxon, he served for 7 years as a consultant to the Federal government (including EPA and the U.S. Coast Guard) assisting with the development of regulations stemming from the Oil Pollution Act of 1990.

Greg also served as an officer in the U.S. Coast Guard both on active duty and in the reserves where he focused on oil spill response issues as well as serving as a deck officer on several USCG cutters.

Greg has a Masters of Environmental Management and a Masters of Business Administration from Duke University in Durham, NC as well as a Bachelor's degree in Environmental Studies from Trinity College in Hartford, CT.
